

Come find out
1 June at 18h15!

Dear AI Enthusiast,

The European Centre for Public Affairs is delighted to invite you to AI and Public Affairs: is AI a Saviour or a Menace?, which we will host on 1 June at 18h15 at Acumen Public Affairs at Rue de la Loi 227, Brussels.

During the event, our distinguished panel of speakers, including academics and practitioners, will examine the following questions to explore whether AI can ultimately replace public affairs professionals, or at least certain functions of public affairs:

1. How has AI already changed the ways in which we work in public affairs?
2. How will public affairs work be impacted by AI in the medium-term?

We are pleased to announce that we have invited to be joined by some outstanding speakers, including:

- Cornelia Kutterer, Member of the OECD.AI Network of Experts. Cornelia engages with partner organisations, policy makers and experts, to identify common guideposts to assess AI risk and impact for Trustworthy AI.
- Dan Nechita, Head of Cabinet MEP Dragos Tudorache (co-rapporteur, AI Act) at European Parliament. Dan leads the work on the EU AI Act that saw dramatic success in the joint IMCO/LIBE committees vote past week.

Loaded with diverse expertise, we are confident that this event will be both informative and thought-provoking, and we believe that you will find it insightful. Our moderator for the event will be Andrew Fielding, Senior Advisor at Acumen Public Affairs.

The event is followed by drinks, providing the chance to discuss and exchange thought provoking ideas on these issues with other interested people.

If you are interested in attending, please RSVP by replying to this email. We look forward to welcoming you.

Best regards,
Christophe Lécureuil
